You may not be familiar with her name, but every time you watch a model sauntering spiritedly down a runway or posing in full-motion, garments grabbing each sinew, you've witnessed Pat Cleveland's influence.

The multi-racial model widened the break in the color barrier, when she arrived on the Paris fashion scene in the 70s. Her vibrant fluidity and singular beauty catapulted her into the fashion stratosphere, and provided inspiration to fashion legends including Halston and Yves St. Laurent.

Cleveland was known for her full, red-lacquered lips, perfectly arched brows, and eyelashes so lush they make her appear heavy-lidded. And then there was the hair – wild, fleecy curls that bounced and twisted as though each had a mind of its own. Although her supermodel heyday may have been 30 years ago, her signature look continues to jump off the page.

Here's how to get her legendary look, for 2010 and beyond:
