

On The Couch With CURLYNIKKI

HAIR THERAPY

COPYRIGHT © 2010 CURLYNIKKI.COM

1/26/2011

Curly Nikki Reviews Miss Jessie's Buttercreme

Posted by CURLYNIKKI | Labels: My Hair, Product Reviews

Hola Chicas,

So y'all know I'm off the wagon, right? In the past couple of weeks I've perused the hair aisles at Target and Ulta looking for the ultimate product to set my Dry Twist-n-Curl. I've spent 60 dollars and wasted time and effort. But I really need something to provide hold, lasting moisture, and lots of shine. Don't get me wrong, I love CURLS Souffle, I just wonder if something can keep my hair softer and moisturized past day three.

The morning after I returned the truck load of diapers to Target, I went back and hit up the 'boutique' hair product aisle. I've read countless (mixed) reviews of Miss Jessie's Curly Pudding, Meringue, and Curly Buttercreme. The consensus is that the Buttercreme is the best product on the line- providing moisture, definition, and hold. Also, their tutorial recommends you use it on dry twist-outs.

Now, for those of you that have been following me from day one, you know how I feel about MJ. I can't knock their hustle. Their marketing is impeccable... genius even, Miko and Titi's hair is stunning, but the ingredients in their products... eh. I've become lenient over the years, dibbling and dabbling in silicones and commercial products, but I've managed to stay away from 'pore clogging' mineral oil and parafin. Ladies, I got caught up... curiosity was killing me and many of my hair idols seem to really like the Buttercream for sets. Plus, I checked out THIS ARTICLE on mineral oil and coconut oil, and finally convinced myself to give it a try. I looked over my shoulder, picked up the 28 dollar (Father Abraham!) jar of MJ, and slyly slipped it into my basket. True story... like I was afraid one of y'all were going to see and judge me!

I've used it twice... both times on dry hair. It's thick, creamy, and smells like Thin Mints. I was light handed the first time, and a little heavier handed the second use. Both times my hair was left frizzy, limp, and ridiculously greasy. I hate 'feeling' the product on my hair. Sadly, it's a no-go. I can see how this product could potentially help protect my fine strands (the way Ultra Sheen did when my mom was doing my bra strap length hair in the '80s), but it's not for me... way too heavy. On a positive note, my

MEET CURLY NIKKI

Licensed Psychotherapist.
Professional Blogger.
Natural Hair Lover!
Wife.Mother.Daughter.Sister.

CONNECT WITH NIKKI

Join the CN.com
Community Forums today!

SPONSORED

hair was very soft and felt moisturized for 4 or 5 days. I'm assuming the emollients in the cream made my hair soft, which is not to be confused with moisture... this product would probably be good for sealing in a water based moisturizer.

I went shopping in my hair closet last night and decided that today, after a wash, and condition, I will give the KeraCare Naturals Butter Cream a try. I'll report back soon!

Have you tried MJ's ButterCreme? What did you think?

Tweet 2

Like 5 people

65 comments:

Anonymous said...

HAHA!! Girl, you are hilarious!! I must say that you did MUCH better than I did. I can't get past those PRICES, LAWD JESUS!! NO ma'am. I am glad that you wrote this review, and we have the same type of hair so I will respectfully decline MJ's products. Thanks for sharing this! :-)

January 26, 2011 1:31 PM

Anonymous said...

LOL @ you thinking that you'd get caught buying the Miss Jessie's. LOL!!!

I used to be hooked on the Baby Buttercreme. I like the way it smells better than the Curly Buttercreme - the Baby Buttercreme smells like custard. I used to use it on my daughter's natural hair because of the smell and the way it "seemed" to provide a lot of moisture. I also used to use it on my edges (when my hair was relaxed. Well, after a while (meaning years) and who knows how many dollars later, I admitted to myself that the product seemed to add a lot of buildup to my daughter's hair. And I started to notice that as I started transitioning to natural, the Baby Buttercreme was irritating my edges! I started seeing redness and itching around my edges. I started using more natural products (like Bee Mine, Jane Carter) and I noticed that there was no irritation and no buildup. Best of all, I liked the cumulative effect the natural products seemed to have: they seemed to condition my hair, the more I used them.

January 26, 2011 1:39 PM

Sheik ;-) said...

LOL! yeah the prices are what I can't get over either. I must say I have tried it...only by going into my aunt's stash of junkism but I wasn't impressed I have very thick hair and it just weighed it down :(

January 26, 2011 1:39 PM

Anonymous said...

Nikki,

This is my first time commenting. I've been following your site for a few weeks now and I absolutely love it! Thanks for continuing to provide information regarding natural hair styles, products, etc. I also love how friendly everyone is on the message boards. Tis' a beautiful thing :)

At any rate, I've also tried MJ Buttercreme & Baby Buttercreme. It is very heavy and it does make your hair feel weighed down. I have pretty dry hair so I was looking for a heavy product but I think the Buttercreme is a bit much. Plus, I can't afford it (I got my jar at a trade show). Maybe it just isn't for everyone.

:)

January 26, 2011 1:41 PM

Anonymous said...

LOL! Nik you are hilarious. Thanks for being so real. I had a similar experience with their products, but I kind of like the Stretch Silkening Cream.

January 26, 2011 1:45 PM

Anonymous said...

Even though the Curly Buttercream was a no go, there is a lot of junk science floating around on the internet about what products you can and can't use. I'm kind of tired of people who don't understand

MONTHLY GIVEAWAY!

Fan my new page on to enter my monthly giveaway for a chance to win!

every follower is eligible!

FAN ME AND WIN!

CurlyNikki
on Facebook

Like You CurlyPag You this Pag

11,122 people like CurlyNikki. 11,121 people like CurlyNikki.

basic chemistry insisting that they know what you can and can't use on your hair. Mineral oil doesn't clog your pores in your scalp. I don't know who ever made that up. While there are other oils that are more similar to sebum that you can use, you won't stop your hair from growing by using cheaper mineral oil products, and people should pick things that agree with their hair and skin (so for example, some people might have allergies to certain things). These mass produced items that are made in the U.S. do have to pass certain standards and are regulated by the FDA.

I think that the Buttercream can work for hair that likes heavy products. I have a friend who uses it, but her hair is a different texture.

I wish more of us studied chemistry, organic chemistry, and biochemistry in college and grad school so more of us knew when we were being sold a false bill of goods. Some of the stuff I read people repeating online is ridiculous and a little embarrassing.

January 26, 2011 1:52 PM

Anonymous said...

P.S...I am SO SO glad that Naturally Curly got an actual chemist/polymer scientist to explain this all...I hope a lot of people read that article and stop spreading nonsense.

January 26, 2011 1:55 PM

kitka82 said...

The Curly Buttercreme was aight on my thick kinks. I grabbed the 2-oz jar at a BSS for nearly $10! Yeesh.... For $10, I want 2 oz of pure magic! Or diamonds...

Sike... seriously, have you tried Donna Marie's Super Buttercreme? It's much lighter, still creamy, but fluffy and not oily. Also, I think it's like $12.00 for an 8 ounce jar.

January 26, 2011 2:01 PM

Dana said...

Hilarious!!!!

Ok... so this is my second and final time going natural. On my first go around I used MJ's products faithfully for the first two months of having a TWA. I BC'ed in July and my hair even though very short was big! MJ's was the only thing that would defrizz and tame my curls... However it wasn't conducive to my budget and it was a little drying. The buttercreme was great at first, but was super greasy, and I couldn't take it. The Curly Pudding made my hair super dry and sticky! I lightened up and wasn't using as much and that didn't help either...

The only products that I would buy of the MJ line is the Curly Meringue & the Baby Buttercreme... That worked best in my hair.

Now that I'm natural again, I can't bring myself to buy their products. Even though I see them everytime I go into Target. I just can't do it...

January 26, 2011 2:18 PM

Anonymous said...

I have tried Curly Pudding & Curly Buttercream more than once. I love the way MJ's products smell, but my hair just doesn't like them.

January 26, 2011 2:27 PM

Anonymous said...

When i first BC'd back in March 2010, MJs, Buttercreme and quick curls was GREAT for my TWA. After reading your blog and product reviews, and having about 6 inches now, I have been using KeraCare with love. I recently went back to MJ in my product closet, after running out of Keracare, and it softened my hair but made it super DRY, if that makes sense....yeah my locks dont like it anymore :-)

Sarah

January 26, 2011 2:30 PM

Anonymous said...

that was insanely hilarious!
i tried the baby buttercreme sample and it was just ok. i liked the smell and everyone else, but it didnt do much style/moisture wise. Shame.

<http://amartianslove.wordpress.com/>

January 26, 2011 2:32 PM

CURLYNIKKI said...

thanks ladies!

Sarah, which KeraCare products are you using?

Tacía

Facebook social plugin

SPONSORED

Get your hair and scalp in shape for the new year.

ADD CN TO YOUR PAGE!

January 26, 2011 2:32 PM

Anonymous said...

I picked up the Quick Curls from Target for $32. My husband looked at me like I was crazy. I used it and it was just ok, but not worth the price tag. I returned it and got my money back. I went to Target today and noticed that all of the Miss Jessie's products are on clearance. I wonder if they are discontinuing the line from the Target stores?

January 26, 2011 2:42 PM

Anonymous said...

My sister loves MJ's Curly Pudding (but she also likes really really flat hair, go figure), I tried a bit of it when I was transitioning on my new growth and it did define the curl pattern and provided hold but it didn't provide any moisture - isn't it supposed to?? I don't think I should have to use 5 accessory products to make one $30 product cooperate. That one was a no-go for me.

January 26, 2011 2:43 PM

Anonymous said...

Hello Everyone
I am currently transitioning I just started 2 months since my last relaxer. Should I start using products for natural hair or relaxed hair since the majority of my hair is still relaxed? Thank you so much for this site Curlynikki. Any advice would be greatly appreciated.

January 26, 2011 2:44 PM

Carla said...

The price plus inferior ingredients always turns me away. Thank you for the balanced review!

January 26, 2011 2:46 PM

Breanna said...

Target will take back any of the MJ products whether opened,used or not lol..lol. Believe I know I've tried 3 of their products and returned back because of smell or didn't like how it made my hair feel. I got my money credited back to my credit card in 2 days.

I actually like the baby buttercreme that I got in the BOGO that I had purchased in the 16oz. I sent off the 2nd one to a newbie along with some other items. The CB is good, but the peppermint smell was too strong, and the CP loved the smell but hated how my hair dried feeling like straw.

January 26, 2011 2:50 PM

Samantha said...

Well I've never used the buttercreme, but I've used the baby butter. I find it's a lot better than their other products, especially as far as build-up is concerned. As you said, it did make my hair feel soft, but the friz and poofiness (not a real word, I know) was unbearable. It also took at least 3 shampoo sessions to get all the residue out....it's probably the wax that's included in most mj products.

January 26, 2011 2:59 PM

Anonymous said...

@Breanna - Love Target's return policy. I was very hesitant about spending 32 bucks. I was willing to give it a try but didn't love it. Got my money back no questions asked.

January 26, 2011 2:59 PM

Breanna said...

Check out this Henna tutorial that "Thesistahchick" fellow youtuber did on her hair.
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=loWWbz9QZZU&feature=player_profilepage

It looks really good, now I didn't buy it myself. I brought the Henna & Placenta Mask from the BSS store. Have any of you ladies tried it yet, and did you like it or not?

January 26, 2011 3:01 PM

Anonymous said...

First two thumbs up, I refused to spend the money on that jar, but I did purchase the 2oz bottle for $9. That in of itself was ridiculous but I wanted to try it and thus I did. It was one of the first lines I tried when transitioning. I did not like it at all. It left my hair greasy feeling which I hate. I have thick fine hair so oily things on my overall head is a no-no. But recently I pulled it out again for a bunnining experiment and for my edges. And I must say for helping my fly aways lay down when I want a bun or a head band is where it's at for this product. And I am light handed with it. Needless to say I am getting my $9 dollars worth because I purchased it in August and still have half left. It is good for 4-5 day hair when you need something to help wrap it up and keep it pushing, but I would never use on my whole head wet or dry. This also holds true for the baby buttercreme. a little goes a LONG way.

January 26, 2011 3:06 PM

Anonymous said...

ALL A CURLY GIRL NEEDS!

CN ON TYRA

FOLLOW ME ON TWITTER

TOPICS

Choose a Topic to View

SEARCH CURLY NIKKI

NATURAL HAIR ARCHIVES

Natural Hair Archives

POPULAR POSTS

About Me...

CurlyNikki Approved-Recommended Products

I'm a fan of the baby buttercreme (it smells beter), for my dry hair it gave me the feeling of moisture that I needed. I don't use it as much as I used to though bcs it costs too much and my hair loves coconut oil just the same.

January 26, 2011 3:11 PM

Anonymous said...

@ Nikki- girl, I would have been looking around too! I was secretly hoping it didn't work for you. LOL! Why? Because what works for you, seems to work on my hair too and I didn't want my pj seduced! LOL!

January 26, 2011 3:35 PM

cmongood said...

I detest the smell. I only own it because it came with the 4a curly cocktail. It's icky and pointless and now I need your help finding something better.

January 26, 2011 3:42 PM

KIMBERLY said...

I personally would like to thank MJ, had they not put their product at Target i would hv never found SheaMoisture curl enhancing smoothie! the BC and BBC was very greasy my hair was weighed down and when i washed it out my hair felt like a brillo pad not to mention all that heavy oil product had my face it a state of constant acne outbreak...everything is not for everybody!!!!

January 26, 2011 3:49 PM

CURLYNIKKI said...

I already feel less motivated to do my hair, lol. I'm so tired y'all. I'm putting off today what I can do on Friday. Rocking this dry arse bun for 2 more days :)

January 26, 2011 3:53 PM

Anonymous said...

Nikki you are outrageous! Too funny about looking over your shoulder at the store. I won't tell nobody! I personally like Miss Jessies Curly Pudding and Baby Buttercreme. No two heads are a like!

January 26, 2011 4:04 PM

kisha said...

i must say when i bc'd last year i used the curly and it tingled on my scalp, i learned the hard way how much build up u get from consistently using it everyday and have to thoroughly wash WITH poo to get it out.

as my hair got longer i used the baby creme, yes im a sucker for punishment but surprisingly i liked it better than the curly! it made it softer and i got hold but after about Day 3 or 4 it feels icky n gooky :(furthermore...i can see why it would be on clearance...dont nobody wanna pay no dmn $30 for an 8 oz (other than nikki, lol) and im NOT payin $50 for a DC...i take part in the BOGO's only!

January 26, 2011 4:11 PM

Regina said...

Wonderfully balanced review, I feel the same way about the buttercream and I really wanted to like it.

January 26, 2011 4:15 PM

Anonymous said...

Nikki - I can't stand most of the MJ products but the Curly Meringue is great! It is light, smells good and gives me a great hold past 3 days! Happy twisting.

January 26, 2011 4:41 PM

Anonymous said...

CN, I just HAVE to thank you for this article because it taught me why my hair HATES coconut oil: "Those with very porous hair may find that coconut oil penetrates too much into the interior of the hair, which can cause its own set of problems such as frizz, greasiness, and limp hair" which is exactly what happens when i have applied coconut oil to my hair EVERY TIME. I thought something was wrong with me, why would such a glorified product do me wrong, now i see it is probably because my hair is highly porous!!

January 26, 2011 4:51 PM

shamigreen said...

LOL... Raise your hand if you'd like to browse Nikki's hair closet... I know I would :)

January 26, 2011 5:01 PM

naturallytia.com said...

Great review! I have some MJBC as well as other MJ products in my stash and found that if I use very little of it on wet hair after applying my leave in it works well, keeps my hair soft and moisturized. The price doesn't really bother me because it lasted me all year (til the next BOGO sale). However, there are

I'm a Henna Head...

Henna Pictorial

Night Time Routine

I'm a Mommy!- Even More Pics...

Wag of the Finger... Natural Hair Products

Finally In Labor!

Unsolicited Commentary- Natural Hair... Revisited

Mo Hair, Mo Problems

NIK ON NATURALLY CURLY

JOIN US!

Follow

with Google Friend Connect

Followers (3439) More products that work better on my hair so it's not a HG for me. Hope you find something that works for ya and can't wait to hear about the Keracare, my inner PJ has been eyeing it!!

January 26, 2011 5:03 PM

Anonymous said...

It's funny you posted this today, Nikki, b/c I recently purchased the trial size jar of Curly Pudding. After using it last night, this morning, I woke up to the best braid out I've ever done. I did a dry braid out with cornrows and satin rollers on my ends. I dampened the braids lightly afterwards. I'm 14 months post relaxer. My hair is shiny, soft, frizz-less and big. Just what I wanted!
MJ has it's negative features (price and ingredients) but it gave me great results! I'm adding it to my arsenal.

January 26, 2011 5:03 PM

Ivy said...

I haven't read all of the comments, but I live in the NYC area, and you can go to Ricky's and get a small size for 7 bucks. It's enough to twist your hair up about twice. Plus Ricky's has LOTS of hair products.

January 26, 2011 5:25 PM

Anonymous said...

Okay went to Target today to get some Miss Jessie's and they were all marked down and I was told they were being discontinued in target. What gives????? Do I have to go back to paying shipping?

January 26, 2011 5:46 PM

Mahogany Soul said...

Qhemet Biologics Amla heavy cream has a similar consistency but isn't greasy. it also leaves my 4a/4b hair moisturized for days. The price is definitely way better and that 8 oz jar I have will last me through the winter as little goes a long way :)

January 26, 2011 6:05 PM

Anonymous said...

If you're experiencing dryness...Have you tried Kimmaytube's leave-in? I use it regularly and it keeps my hair moisturized for 7 days.

January 26, 2011 6:54 PM

Devonee said...

Mahogany Soul, I like QB Amla and Olive Heavy Cream too. I mix it with QB Olive and Honey Hydrating Balm. I'm not too fond of MJ Buttercream (too heavy), Pudding (too flakey) or Meringue (too flakey). I do like the Super Sweetback Treatment.

January 26, 2011 7:23 PM

DvaAuNaturel said...

@Anonymous 1:52 PM "These mass produced items that are made in the U.S. do have to pass certain standards and are regulated by the FDA." That does not mean those products are good for your or are necessarily safe. We hear all the time in the news about products and some of the foods that our FDA regulates get recalled and/or get contaminated (remember spinach and e.coli, beef recalls, PhenFen, etc.). Check out recalls here <http://www.fda.gov/Safety/Recalls/default.htm>. Thank goodness for the chemist who do exist on these blogs. As long as we understand the basics we're good - we don't need to be certified chemists or studied chemistry in depth if that was not a major. Don't be embarrassed. If you have the knowledge, pay it forward and share with others in some forum. I don't even know why I'm saying all this. I guess your post was just a little condescending and unnecessary IMO.

Anyway, I used to use Buttercreme and it was greasy. LOL @ Nikki sneaking around in Target buying MJ. Wish it would have worked for you but it sounds like you have plenty of alternatives in your product closet ; -D.

January 26, 2011 7:53 PM

Anonymous said...

You should have tried the baby buttercreme, the curly buttercreme is a bit too greasy for me also, baby buttercreme is the best thing from miss jesses

January 26, 2011 7:53 PM

Melodee said...

Nikki you keep me rolling!

My PJ'ism started with MJ and I bought BIG jars of Curly Pudding, Baby Buttercreme, AND the Curly Meringue!

My hair tolerates MJ products for maybe 4 days and then I end up with frizz and no curl definition. I'm trying to use up all of the crap that I have bought, before I continue my search for the ultimate product (whatever it may be).

Already a member? Sign in

NETWORKED BLOGS

Followers (1973)

Follow this blog

NIKKI'S FAVORITE POSTS

Tyra Show Appearance

Natural Hair and Self-Esteem

On the Couch with Wanda Sykes!

On the Couch with Christette Michele

Achieving the Bossiest Afro

Achieving the Perfect Bantu Knot-Out

Perfecting the Twist-Out

Best Hair Rollers

Sleek Edges, No Gel!

Thoughts on Motherhood

If any of you ladies have any suggestions for a light weight styling product that moisturizes and doesn't cost me my first born let me know!

January 26, 2011 8:12 PM

Anonymous said...

I tried baby buttercreme as a sample and ended up leaving it at my boyfriend's for his daughters. Left my hair greasy but not moisturized. Still have 16 oz size of curly pudding and meringue sitting in the bathroom both leave me with snowflakes and dried out twists. Hello Uncle Funky's Daughter curly magic and extra butter my staples!

January 26, 2011 8:15 PM

Breanna said...

FYI ladies "BeadsBraidsBeyond" is giving away 2 Tangle Teezer Magic Flowerpots on the blog for the kids.

<http://beadsbraidsbeyond.blogspot.com/2011/01/were-giving-away-two-tangle-teezer.html>

January 26, 2011 8:25 PM

Anonymous said...

I always appreciate an honest review. I started using MJ during my transition from relaxed to natural. It was the first products I purchased and I went IN! I bought all the sample sizes and fell in love with the smells. MJ is what allowed me to transition so long and made both of my textures manageable. Once I BC'd, MJ had to go. Pudding wasn't working in my coils and I hated how much product it seemed I needed just to get it to perform the way I wanted...and the price..LAWD! But, it was love at first sight, and if my hair liked it now, I would totally slap on some Baby Buttercream as a sealer... I ain't gonna lie, lol. Smells amazing and smooths down some mean edges...haha!

January 26, 2011 8:58 PM

Anonymous said...

@Melodee, try Hydrathermal Naturals Daily Moisturizing Growth Lotion.

healthyhairjourney.com

The growth is attributed to the emu oil in it, but its super lightweight, smells like vanilla icing and wow it makes my hair super soft. 8oz for $18.99 I think. A little goes a long way. It's a staple for me.

January 26, 2011 9:04 PM

Anonymous said...

Miss Jessie is OVERRATED!!! It's way too expensive and there are so many other products that do just as good if not better than them for way less money!! Sorry Miss Jessie you are too expensive we are in a recession!

January 26, 2011 10:14 PM

Ladybug said...

Nikki, love ur site! It has made my life so much easier. About Miss Jessie's Buttercreme - hated it! I have two jars in my house from last years BOGO sale. 1. It stinks - I don't like minty things in my hair, too medicine-y. 2. Too greasy. 3. It does not crossover to wet sets (that is a double suck for me). I did like MJ's Curly Pudding for my wet sets. And the fragrance is wonderful.

January 26, 2011 10:17 PM

Claudette said...

You might like the baby buttercreme. I hear that it's a lot lighter. I'm considering retrying it. I forgot why I stopped using it. I recently bought an 8oz 70% full jar of Carol's Healthy Hair butter for $7 (that included s&h) on lola's green hair so I'm excited to try that.

January 27, 2011 1:08 AM

Anonymous said...

I've never used Miss Jessie's products. Though I have been curious, the price tag stops me cold, lol! I have been using the Keracare Natural Textures line for the past month and I like it. I think I need to play with the products a little more and see how they fare with other products that I use, but as a line of products, they are pretty good. If they become more available in stores I might be inclined to put them in my rotation regularly. I've used the Cleansing Cream (love) the Leave-In Conditioner, the Butter Cream and the Twist and Define Cream. Pretty decent prices too compared to what I've paid for other products!

January 27, 2011 1:25 AM

Anonymous said...

I tried this when I BC'd a few years ago (bought a sample size that was still pretty expensive at about $7-$9) and thought it was just okay. I felt it just kinda laid on top of my hair. (Kanye shrug) ~KF519

January 27, 2011 10:33 AM

Anonymous said...

I didn't have any luck with Curly Buttercreme or the Baby Buttercream. I HATE the smell - I feel like I smelled like toothpaste! My husband has had a lot of success with MJ's products. He uses the CB when his hair is low and Curly Pudding when it is fuller. The only MJ product that I swear by is the Quick Curls for wash-n-go. And I only buy their products when they are BOGO! Too expensive!

January 27, 2011 10:35 AM

Stacy said...

LOL...I thought that MJ's products were all I should use at first but quickly learned that the price and build up were not worth it. I do like their conditioners though. My hair responds well to Jane Carter's products. I have tried Curls and Keracare and by the second day it left my a little dry. :(

January 27, 2011 11:40 AM

Anonymous said...

I am going skrate to Target before work tonight and stalk the MJ for clearance prices.

My 4b/c curls are fine and dry - I tried the Baby Buttercreme for my twistouts a few weeks ago, and now I'm no longer ashamed if anyone touches my hair.

If loving you is wrong - I don't wanna be right...

-Thetruthisoutthere

January 27, 2011 12:16 PM

Anonymous said...

I used to love them as well but the product build up and heaviness is only great when needing to have the hair smooth for a bun or a puff. My new thing for dry twist outs--aloe vera gel from TJs and carefree curl gel activator--YES, CARE FREE CURL! Go light on the activator. The moisture and definition cannot be beat!

Peace and Blessings All!

January 27, 2011 12:20 PM

Anonymous said...

I first tried Miss Jessie's Buttercreme because of their BOGO sale and all of the hype surround the company. It's a good product but it's not worth the price. I'm a broke college student and spending that amount for a product that does not consist of the best ingredients is NOT a good investment. I stopped using it 1. because I noticed my hair actually grew slower and 2. it left my hair feeling way too greasy. I sold the other Curly Buttercreme on Ebay lol. I went back to Shea Moisture products which are cheaper with MUCH better ingredients.

January 27, 2011 3:02 PM

Anonymous said...

I only tried baby butter creme as well as curly pudding. if you are going to have cheap ingredients, then don't charge me 58 dollars. it is like whole foods charging more money for regular pesticide ridden fruits and veggies. What is your line of reasoning? Anyways..Return it! get your full refund, or exchange it. As for curly pudding if you are curious, it leaves white residue on a fierce looking braid out. mad me so sad

January 27, 2011 3:16 PM

Anonymous said...

lol at nikki at target. Great review, thanks!

January 27, 2011 3:44 PM

Anonymous said...

Oh and I hate the regular buttercreme but find the baby one to be a little lighter, still greasy though.

January 27, 2011 3:45 PM

Anonymous said...

I purchased the 8 oz baby buttercreme & curly pudding during their BOGO sale. My hair LOVED the curly pudding - I had the best braid out ever and it smells so good. And I didn't have the FRIZZ factor going on! I also like the baby buttercreme; used at night to moisturize hair before bed. Due to their pricing, I think will only purchase during their yearly BOGO sale.

January 27, 2011 6:11 PM

Bronxgirl said...

I am a child of depression era parents. I just couldn't open my purse to pay those kind of prices and I am well beyond the age of believing in 'miracle' products! Reviews have not been particularly kind to MJ products. They speak for me...NEXT!

January 27, 2011 7:47 PM

Anonymous said...

I recently bought Miss Jessie's baby Buttercreme during their BOGO sale. On the first use I liked how my twists came out but my hair was very very greasy. I could not even put my hand in my pair. I absolutely hate feeling greasy hair like that. On day 2, my roots were just as greasy but looked dry. I am hell bent on using all the product since I paid so much for it but I give it a thumbs down. No Ms Jessie for me anymore.

January 27, 2011 8:09 PM

Amber said...

I tried Miss Jessie's because it worked so well for a friend of mine. I wasn't impressed with what it did for my hair. I got better results with cheaper products so I'm never buying it again.

January 27, 2011 10:08 PM

Tiffani said...

I am so glad to have read this post today!!!! I have had this product for about 2 years now and have struggled with how to use it and thus only using it sporadically along with the Curly Pudding. Btw I still have NO idea what anyone could use the Curly Pudding for, it's just bad news all over. So, I had just reviewed it on naturally curly.com's Product Search and it didn't have very high reviews. Just two days ago I put in on my natural curls and I loved that it defined them without making it crunchy but it still left them feeling greasy and weighed down. I have a really small jar that I got from a "natural" salon in Charlotte bc lord knows they are super expensive and I hope you take yours right back to Target with their lovely 90 day return policy. I am still on the fence on finding the right product to give me moisture and definition and not leave my curls crunchy.

January 28, 2011 12:47 AM

Post a Comment

Comment as:

Newer Post

Home

Older Post

Subscribe to: Post Comments \(Atom\)

INFO

About Me
Advertise
Contact
Privacy Policy

QUICK LINKS

CurlyNikki's Fav Products
My Nightly Hair Routine
My Routine
Celebrity Interviews
FAQs
Natural Hair Dictionary
For Transitioners

QUICK LINKS (cont)

My Apperance on Tyra Show
Body Image and Self-Esteem
CurlyNikki Meetups
Current Giveaways
My Curls
Natural Hair Idols