Has anyone tried the Jane Carter Solutions products? I recently ordered the Wrap/Roll (for roller setting), the daily leave-in conditioner and the Wrap & Sculpt (for shake & go). I've tried them all a couple of times, but I just can't decide whether they are too drying for my hair (4a,b,c,d,e,f....z).

Anyone else has her line....I would like to know what you think? Just started using ORS hair mayo., and I'm wondering if that is what's making my hair so dry. The ORS feels good on my hair after rinse-out, however my

I personally love the Nourish & Shine (not greasy at all, little goes a long way, and smells great!) and the wrap N' Roll, especially when I was relaxed. When I started my transition I used it for roller sets with great results. It wasn't drying at all, no flakes, added lots of shine, and again, great scent.

The nourish & shine is good!

O.k. here's my dilemma - I've been transitioning with kinky twists and I want to take them out this weekend. I've been on the boards and making note of all the products that everyone has been pleased with and purchased a few. There are 2 products that I want desperately, but cannot locate in my area. Kemi Oyl Shea Butter Pomade and Elasta QP Mango Butter. I've decided to just order them online, but for my natural debut, I would like to have something that softens moistens, yet isn't greasy and also restores the natural curl. These are all the attributes described in those products especially the Shea Butter Pomade. Can someone point me in the direction of a product that's more commonly found. I'm in Greensboro, NC, and we do have Korean Beauty Supply stores, Sally's, Walmart, Walgreens, etc. Thanks - I'd so appreciate your help!!

I haven't tried the Nourish/Shine, so I'm going to order that. However, I did a wash/shake last night, conditioning with good old Kenra, and then applying the Leave-in along with the shake & go from Jane Carter. I must say my hair came out perfect...if there's such a thing.

My hair is shiny and moisturized, with the most wonderful curl definition (ringlets). When I went to bed, I made one ponytail on either side and used my scrunchy to band the hair. Took them out this morning, gave my hair a shake and fluff...just gorgeous. I definitely believe the ORS mayo. was drying out my hair.

Going to have to go to Trade Secrets and get more Kenra. I also may order the Jane Carter deep conditioner when I order the Nourish/Shine. Will let you know how that works out.

PS: Forgot to mention I also used Ebene styling/shine oil after applying the other leave-ins on soaking wet hair. Love Ebene also.

If you have the kinky twist extensions then your hair will be very dry. I think shea butter will be the best thing in addition to no-poo, daily until you get back your softness/moisture. Don't use a cap when you go in the shower because the steam will soften your hair a lot. Good luck

Bump, Bump!

Okay, so I have been looking at this stuff off and on and have decided that I want to buy some. The ingredients aren't as good as I thought they would be, but they aren't all bad either. So here is what I want

Nourish & Shine
Nutrient Replenishing Conditioner(cause yall now I'm addicted to conditioners)
Condition and sculpt!

has anyone else tried this stuff and what do you think?? There aren't any full threads on this stuff so I'm kind of skeptical, but I do know that if I don't order anything else, I'm ordering the Nourish & Shine!

Way back when I first went all natural, I tried Jane Carter: shampoo, conditioner, nourish and shine, and aloe vera leave-in. The shampoo was like washing my hair with detergent. The conditioner did not detangle or soften. The leave in made my hair dry. The only thing that worked and to me is the best butter on the market is the nourish and shine. Smells good (very light scent) and no beeswax!!!

The last time I checked, I don't remembe the ingredients being bad (no parabens, mineral oil, silicones and etc.). I think it the ingredients are really good.

I love the nourish and shine, the replenishing conditioner, the revitalizing leave-in, the scalp renew.....shoot I love it all but the shampoo (very drying), and I did have good experiences with the condition and sculpt while I was transitioning. I want to try the wrapping lotion. Urbanbella is offering 25% off on all Jane Carter products now through the month of July.
