Does anyone have luck with these? I have some leftover BB K4C that I used yesterday. My hair seemed a lot lighter, more airy and had definition. I kind of liked it but was worried about it turning into a frizzy cotton candy mess as the day went on, plus it was humid and I had school, so I pulled it into my usual stand by ponytail. I used my usual of aloeba:

I'm thinking about maybe trying to dilute the aloeba:

Any experience or thoughts?

I use Jane Carter's Revitalizing Leave-In Conditioner:

It smells good,

helps detangle, and is very lightweight, but moisturizing.

I've used this one (above) as well as Oyin's Juice & Berries: http://www.curlmart.com/Oyin-Handmade-Juices--Berries-p-757.html?utm\_source=naturallycurly.com&utm\_medium=text-link&utm\_content=curltalk-post-text&utm\_campaign=oyin-juices-and-berries-nourishing-herbal-leavein . They are both good spray leave-ins ... but I still prefer the cremes. I don't find the spray ones enough. Out of the two though, I found Jane Carter to be the better leave-in. I prefer the smell of Oyin's but the results of Jane Carter.

I use the Jane Carter one on my daughter's hair all the time. She has very fine 2a-b wavy hair ... it gets weighed down easily. This one works really well on her hair.

I love The Jane Carter Revitalizing Leave In Conditioner as well. It prevents my hair from being dry in between washes and workouts!
