Jane Carter Solution "wrap & roll" + Curlformers...

Hello Feisties,

I tried a new product last week: Jane Carter Solution "wrap & roll," which is a foaming wrap lotion/setting lotion. I really wanted to try a new product, and I figured a Curlformer set would be a great test style.

It didn't really turn out to be as great as I thought it would. The set came out fine, but it really couldn't last. I didn't get that great "ribbons effect," as seen in the photo below:

But if you watch the video, you'll see that the curls didn't quite come out that way...

Long story short, I won't be using "wrap & roll" for Curlformer sets anymore. Next time I use it, I'll try it with an old-fashioned roller set, which should work a lot better because my hair doesn't need as much hold when in rollers.

What have your experiences been with "wrap & roll"? What other foaming lotions/setting lotions do you ladies suggest?

I'm a huge fan of Pantene's Relaxed and Natural setting lotion. I'm transitioning without the use of any heat so I use this to do roller sets then let it dry overnight!

I've tried the wrap and roll several times...I wanted to like it but it really did not provide enough hold to last. I did curlformers and rollersets and neither turned out to my liking =/

I tried your method of the aloe vera gel last night and I'm pretty pleased with the results. This is only my second try and I didn't let it dry the first time. I used the long and wide kit as well as 2 packs of long and narrow and I could have used another pack or two. I was thinking of buying the Jane Carter but glad I saw your review before my target run.

I used Elasta QP Styling foam it has alot of great oils in it. And i did my curlformers set on saturday and I'm on day 5 with the set. And it dries quickly if your hair is damp and not saturated. minse was dry in about 5 hours.
